This micro-show could be something like... mirror, mirror on the wall... no!

“Ai de Mim, Ai doEu...” is the search of an ephemeral puppet made of clay and hands, which accidentally strips itself of its ego and haughtiness.

A lonely character, in a landscape of spoils, forced to live according to what they provide him... Road accidents, company, fears and better half...

Ai de Mim, Ai doEu is a project that was born and developed from a small spontaneous experience in Marionetas Vadias, puppet encounters in cabaret tones, which took place between 2016 and 2018 in Porto.

In my journey as a puppet maker, of the most varied genres, I focus on the facial expression and personality strength of the characters. Construction often begins with clay, which allows it to be moulded into whatever the hands that shape it want. Clay is a temperamental material. Even so, it is transformed into details of perfection by the same hands that give it body and soul.

This was one of the principles that led me to explore this half-body clay puppet, the perfect symbiosis between the object and its creator.

So beautiful and so brutal, a body of flesh, an almost human pinocchio. So sure of it and itself that it doesn't look at itself in its fragility. What happens if it loses shape? Does it also lose its reason for being? And where does this persona move and discover? In the same space where it was born. In the chaos of the workshop where it walked and found itself stumbling between a thousand and one objects from ancient gleanings, piled up and coupled, undifferentiated between tools and pieces of clay.

And so we are at home, the hands and the host. The puppet that is contemplated cyclically metamorphoses into nothingness, and from nothing is formed again.

“Ai de Mim, Ai doEu” is a short-duration show of about 15 minutes. It repeats itself 3 times throughout 2 hours and 15 minutes – 45 minutes for each iteration. It happens within a scenic device which hosts scenario and an audience of about 20 people. The proximity with the audience is essential and this structure allows everyone to see the small details with quality.

The scenario is made of an iron structure, which holds a landscape of different sized and shaped objects. It's in this scenario that a clay and hands puppet builds and deconstructs itself in the search of its lost identity.

TRUPE FANDANGA

Trupe Fandanga was born in Porto in 2014, under the direction of Sandra Neves, making its first performance in a WIP of the Porto International Puppet Festival that year with Botequim. It intends to be a research space in the construction and manipulation of puppets and objects. They work with puppets outside the conventional space of representation and have a special fondness for intimate and small-scale shows. In addition to Botequim, Trupe premieres in 2019 the micro-show of puppets Onirotóptero, which follows the line of the theatre of lambe-lambe. In 2021, Qubim premieres, which circulates through the main puppet festivals at national and international levels. In 2023, they debut Ai de Mim, Ai doEu, their fourth creation.
