Qubim

CRL CENTRAL ELETRICA

A thing is a thing and another thing is another thing.
Things are what they are, 'til they're not.

A box... doesn't exist by itself. Empty boxes are only half a thing. Our gaze also changes the essence of things.
An empty van... it still is a van even when it's full of boxes. And you can change the order of things and fill it to the top...

Qubim is a show of puppets and boxes with puppets inside. The stage is the van full of boxes. The boxes are filled with the memories of two gleaners who arrange and disarrange them. They open doors, swing hinges, create passages, reveal figures. Some objects turn into puppets and puppets awaken when a box is lifted.

Qubim is about searching and rebuilding from fragments. In it, lives and contradictions blend together, embodied by peculiar and distinctive puppets.

The word qubim derives from the Arab al-qubbah and the architecture term alcove, which refers to a recess in a room. IT is the starting point for Qubim, a cluster of cells with a code to define their nature and function – or the lack thereof. Cells like boxes, buildings, hearts, touching, communicating, meeting and withdrawing.

Each box houses a gleaned object made into a figure. They “self-organize”, live their parallel lives. Together they form a pulsing organism in constant transformation, expanding and retracting.

Qubim is a show of hybrid objects and puppets, in which the puppeteers are in sight, and thus blend with the set and the figures. The narrative follows a simple storyline, allowing for the micro-stories of the figures in the boxes, and creating a surreal atmosphere where different techniques and scales of construction and manipulation can be explored.

TRUPE FANDANGA

Trupe Fandanga was created in Porto in 2014, under the direction of Sandra Neves, and had their first public presentation in the WIP program of the FIMP - Festival Internacional de Marionetas do Porto that same year with the show Botequim.

The company aims to be a space for research in puppet and object construction and manipulation. Their work focuses on presenting puppets outside conventional settings, with a special interest in intimate, small-scale shows. After Botequim, the Trupe presented the micro-puppet show Onirotóptero in 2019, following the Brazilian miniature puppetry tradition of 'Teatro Lambe Lambe'. In 2021, their new show Qubim tours the main puppet festivals in Portugal.
